

ABSTRACT

A tester for testing components of a communication system, such as an optical communication system is disclosed. The tester may utilize a testing method to test a communication component (e.g. a cable or repeater) by stressing a test signal. The tester may utilize external transmitters and external receivers in order to implement the test in a similar communication environment as the tested communication components normally operate.